

Use Case

Generate and run a campaign

Task Overview

Generate and view a new campaign

- The user persona performing this task is represented by Strategic Matt, a dungeon master
- Matt has recently completed a Dungeons and Dragons campaign with his friends
- As the group's dungeon master, Matt wants to create a new campaign to start soon, but doesn't have the time to come up with the campaign by himself
- He begins by opening Dungeon Forge

Matt notices the instructions and fills out the form

The screenshot shows a web form titled "Create a New Campaign" with a light blue header and a stylized mountain and sun illustration. Below the title is a sub-header: "Fill out the form below and see your campaign come to life". The form contains several sections with questions and input fields:

- How many player characters?: A numeric input field with a minus sign, the number "1", and a plus sign.
- What levels should the players achieve?: Two dropdown menus labeled "Starting Level" and "Ending Level".
- How does your group feel about role-playing opportunities?: Three radio button options:
 - ☐ We love to role play
 - ☐ We are okay with role play
 - ☐ We'd prefer not to role play much
- How does your group feel about traps?: Three radio button options:
 - ☐ The more traps the better
 - ☐ Keep us on our toes, but not too many traps
 - ☐ We are wary of traps, let's not encounter many
- How does your group feel about puzzles?: Three radio button options:
 - ☐ Bring it on!
 - ☐ We should be able to figure out a few
 - ☐ Puzzles waste too much time
- How does your group feel about combat?: Three radio button options:
 - ☐ We all wanted to be Barbarian class
 - ☐ We won't back down from a fight
 - ☐ We prefer diplomacy

At the bottom of the form is a button labeled "CREATE CAMPAIGN".

Two red arrows point from external text boxes to the form: one points to the sub-header "Fill out the form below and see your campaign come to life", and the other points to the "CREATE CAMPAIGN" button.

Matt taps the "Create Campaign" button

Matt sees the success
popup and taps the “Start Your Adventure” button

The screenshot shows a web form titled "Create a New Campaign" with a subtext "Fill out the form below and see your campaign come to life". A large, semi-transparent gray popup box is centered on the screen, displaying the text "Your campaign is ready" and a stylized blue line-art icon of a person climbing a mountain. At the bottom of the popup is a button labeled "START YOUR ADVENTURE". A red arrow points from the text box on the left to this button. The background form contains several sections with input fields and radio buttons:

- How many player characters? with a numeric input field showing "1" and minus/plus buttons.
- What levels should the campaign be? with a dropdown menu showing "Starting Level".
- How does your group feel about role play? with three radio button options:
 - ☐ We love to role play
 - ☐ We are okay with role play
 - ☐ We'd prefer not to role play much
- How does your group feel about traps? with three radio button options:
 - ☐ The more traps the better
 - ☐ Keep us on our toes, but not too many traps
 - ☐ We are wary of traps, let's not encounter many
- How does your group feel about puzzles? with one visible radio button option:
 - ☐ Bring it on!

Matt sees the generated campaign and can now walk through the campaign with his group
